LEGACY

The themes of American patriotism were common in 19th century steam with many locomotives named for founding fathers, the nation, states or themes of liberty and freedom. By our Centennial celebration in 1876, railroads were a driving force in America's rapid expansion. Many a locomotive was adorned with special decoration at the time and as we look back today on our 250th year, the American 4-4-0 is an enduring icon of our proud history. This brass-hybrid model takes its inspiration from several notable prototypes of the era. Whether you have a fondness for early steam locomotives, or are just brimming with modern American patriotism, the "America" should find a place on your roster.

AMERICAN FREEDOM TRAIN

The American Freedom Train made a grand tour of the United States for our Bicentennial in 1976. In honor of the train's 50th Anniversary and America's 250th, Lionel is re-releasing all our previously offered cars as well as never-before available display and support cars to build the complete train! The core of the train featured an entrance and exit car bracketing 10 exhibit cars. Patrons passed through these cars on moving belts as they viewed and listened to narrated exhibits. Each car featured its own theme and collections covering history and popular culture. The exhibit cars also featured backlit panels visible on the outside in place of baggage doors.

These cars are all modeled in our 4 pack and 2 packs. The Exit/Power car included in the 4 pack even includes generator sounds! Newly added to the Lionel consist this year are the two showcase cars which featured large picture windows and larger artifacts inside visible from the outside of the car day or night. Featuring new tooling, LED illumination and 3D printed interior details, these distinctive cars are a signature part of the Freedom Train!

In addition to the public cars, the train also needed support cars for the crew, press and supplies. Behind the exhibit cars you'd find another generator and bunk car, No. 200, which has also not been previously offered and includes generator sounds. Crew sleeping car 201, a converted 4-4-2 sleeper for the crew, plays a variety of Patriotic music, sound clips and welcome messages for your patrons along with rolling train sounds when in motion.

VISIONLINE GP40-2

Although often overshadowed by its bigger 6-axle brother, EMD's GP40-2 had its own role to play in the 1970s and 1980s. EMD and GMD built over 1100 of the model between 1972 and 1986. Most railroads purchased the GP40-2 for priority inter-modal trains - a growing and high profile business throughout this period. Multiple units on the point of fast trains of trailer flatcars and eventually double stacks became the symbol of railroading's rebirth across the country. Into the 1990s and beyond, the GP40-2 remained reliable power. Picking up new paint schemes and assignments, they could be found working a wide variety of freight, local and even yard assignments. Hundreds remain in operation today.

Over the 14 year production span, there were many factory changes and railroad-applied options to the GP40-2. With early units more closely resembling their GP40 predecessors and late production models sharing more in common with GP50 and 60 series locomotives, the GP40-2 is a transitional model and the perfect starting point for a planned series of future Lionel releases. Designed from prototype drawings and extensive photo and field research, the new VISION GP40-2s feature our greatest level of prototype-specific tooling options to date. Multiple body changes have been designed to not only capture production changes but also common alterations later in life. These Geeps are anything but generic!

In addition to this all new tooling, all of our VISION GP40-2s feature a new smoke effect. This effect uses a second smoke unit and chamber to produce extra exhaust output during start up and between notches as you accelerate. If you like big smoke, these GP40-2s are sure to please. Also for the first time, where appropriate, our diesels will feature new tri-color classification lights. These can be set to display red, green, or white indications - those found most commonly still found in this era. Additionally, front and rear ditch lights, Mars, strobe, LSL and emergency light options are also available wherever appropriate by road name. All units will also feature walkway, step, track, and instrument and panel lights. These locomotives feature our kinematic pilots and can be easily converted to fixed pilots and scale couplers if desired. We are recording all new locomotive sounds and of course as VISION locomotives, all will feature road number specific Crewtalk.

If you're a fan of mainline railroading in the last 50 years, the GP40-2 is long overdue! Why not make the wait worth it with the best in Lionel VISION LINE features and detailing? See your dealer to pre-order yours today!

On the real railroad, a good day is when nothing goes wrong. But life's headaches can make for some interesting operations on our model railroads! These new breakdown units are sure to give your little crews fits as they find multiple ways to stretch out the day's work. In addition to all the great details, lighting and sound features of our VISION GP40-2's, we've replaced the motors in these models with an extra pair of smoke units and even more lighting effects. That's right, these diesels have four smoke units! This allows us to simulate a variety of issues. A blown turbocharger will send a double-dose of smoke up the stack. Overheated brakes or a bad traction motor? Watch for extra lights and smoke coming from around the rear truck. Something gone array in the engine room? You'll see smoke billowing from the radiator screens at the back of the locomotive. Of course there will be plenty of crew talk and radio chatter to go along with this. Once you've brought the train to a safe stop, addressed the issue and cleared it with the tower, you'll be back up and running again for now!

VISION BREAKDOWN FEATURES:

- Breakdown units feature road number-specific body and lighting details like powered VISION GP40-2s
- Non-powered
- Two dual-smoke units for standard, notching and breakdown effects
- Multiple breakdown scenarios play at random when the Emergency Stop button is pressed on your LEGACY controller
- Scenario-specific smoke output, dialog and lighting
- Twin speaker SuperBass sound system
- Dual ElectroCoupplers
- Multiple road specific lights and details

Frisco received 25 GP40-2s in 1979. They all made it to Burlington Northern and retained their trademark Frisco nose lights for a short time after getting green paint. There were some changes, however, these locomotives had lost their rock pilots but gained additional MU plugs and cab roof beacons. In addition to the nose and cab roof lights, models feature front and rear tri-color class lights. All models feature a "Phase 2B" car body. Horn and cab beacon style and location vary by road number like the prototypes!

Chessie was the largest owner of the GP40-2, with all three subsidiary roads receiving them in multiple orders. Each order had its own subtle differences. All these models represent the first order for the C&O with "Phase 1A" bodies as delivered in 1972. Spotting features from this run include the shorter 81" nose, early radiator screens and solid battery box doors (the Chessie standard "mail slot" doors were still in the future.) All also featured the common Chessie rock plow pilots and the ACI tracking tags added to handrails. Lighting features include tri-color front and rear class lights.

CSX inherited not only Chessie's huge roster of GP40-2s but many examples from former Family Lines roads and eventually Conrail as well giving them the largest and most diverse fleet on the rails to this day. In the early 1990s, CSX began equipping many of their GP40-2s to act as mother units with road slugs rebuilt from GP30 and GP35 models. Our GP40-2s in this run are three such units which trace their heritage back to an order by the Seaboard Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville in 1980, decorated and detailed to match a late 1990s/early 2000s appearance with "Bright Future" paint and white cab roofs. The units have long since lost their class lights but now sport ditch lights on the front anti-climber along with their original nose-mounted headlights. Delivered in 1980, these "Phase 2C" models feature numerous body differences from their Chessie partners on the CSX system.

Following the success of their GP40s, Rio Grande ordered its first of the upgraded units in 1972 and received its first 35 units by the end of 1974. Modeled as delivered in striking black and orange speed lettering paint, these will stand out even more with their nose-mounted Gyrolites! The Phase 1A models feature the common early production spotting features and tri-color class lights. Used frequently on priority trailer trains, they even showed up on occasion as power for the Ski Train.

Neither Norfolk and Western nor Southern purchased any new GP40-2s, but NS inherited a sizable fleet from Conrail in 1999. Conrail's roster included four separate orders with multiple detail variations along with five units originally built for Reading. One of those ex-RDG units, No. 3001, is included here along with two representatives from Conrail's 1979 class. Despite their age, NS has made great use of its GP40-2s. Our models show their modernized look from the early 2000s on with class lights removed and ditch lights (front and rear) added. Differences between the 3001 and its younger siblings are too numerous to count - but that small 2600-gallon fuel tank and trademark Reading rain gutter on the cab roof are instant spotting features!

Both the Southern Pacific and Cotton Belt received multiple orders of late-production GP40-2s. While all of them had distinctively Southern Pacific lighting packages, the last group also sported a lot of unique body details as well. Delivered in 1984, these "Phase 3" units look more like GP60s with their angled traction motor blower ducts, straight sills and modern battery box doors. Add in extended range dynamic brakes, Q fans and silent exhaust and these models show the ultimate development of the GP40-2. We've modeled these as built with their front and rear Mars and emergency lights intact and operational!

As CSX began to define its own united identity, several experimental paint schemes were tried. Very few locomotives and only two GP40-2s received this first variation with the full "CSX Transportation" name in 1986. 6382 was the only ex-L&N GP40-2 to be so painted and was featured in numerous corporate advertisements early on. It continued to wear this paint in service before being renumbered 6478 around 1990. The model replicates not only the unique paint from its late 80s look but also key spotting features like the nose-mounted headlight and class lights.

VISIONLINE ETHANOL CARS

Unit trains of ethanol have been a common sight across the United States for the past two decades. Mile-long black snakes of tank cars are often punctuated by older "buffer" cars on each end and road power commonly stays with the train as well providing some color and interest especially on connecting lines. An increasing variety of ethanol company names and logos adorn the car, adding even more modeling appeal.

Lionel's latest ethanol set combines this "old and new" appearance. Union Pacific 9696, one of the last units to remain in Chicago Northwestern paint leads a Midwest Ethanol train featuring two different company liveries on the tank cars and even two variations in the buffer cars including an old-school MoPac buzzsaw! But what will really set this train apart on your railroad are the fun features of the pair of VISION tank cars spaced into the consist. Complete with loading and unloading sequences and FreightSounds activating by motion, curve and impact sensors, these VISION tank cars bring the train to life. Who says unit trains have to be boring?! This modern consist is sure to turn some heads on your railroad. Want more fun? All tank cars in this release feature all new road numbers not previously offered. Additional standard and VISION ethanol tank cars are available separately.

LEGACY ALLEGHENY

Move over Big Boy...a new heavyweight is stepping out onto the turntable! There are many contenders to the "est" in steam, but the Allegheny certainly earned many of those titles. Whatever your qualifications, the Allegheny undeniably ranks as one of the most impressive steam locomotives ever constructed. With 60 built in multiple orders for the C&O and 10 more very similar "Blue Ridge" 2-6-6-6s for the Virginian, Lima's Allegheny was also a top seller. Chessie's road saw the big power as a suitable replacement for the H-7 "Simple Simons" on the steep Allegheny grades. They later migrated north and west, hauling coal and freight through West Virginia and Ohio. Meanwhile the Virginian kept them rolling massive 140+ car trains along the gentle eastern portion of their railroad. No matter the terrain, the Alleghenies never seemed outmatched by any assignment. Only the coming of the diesel age could extinguish their fires, but the impression they made still burns.

Lionel's latest release of this beast includes many of your most requested additions! Although not branded as "VISION" these models are truly top-of-the-line. Under the hood, we've added a smokebox speaker for stereo sounds, whistle and safety valve steam, a kinematic drawbar and force coupler. We've also relocated all control switches, so you won't have to keep lifting this monster off the rails! On the exterior, we've modified the firebox and added correct details for both the "early" and "late" C&O production runs which include correct bell brackets, cab windows, overfire jets and cab steps. Available in multiple accurate numbers for each version, we're also offering a few fun fantasy schemes including N&W (ex-Virginian), Rio Grande and of course our popular C&O "Chessie" scheme - after all, 23 of these monsters were equipped for steam heating. So, get ready to test your benchwork, the heavyweight champion of steam is coming to your Lionel dealer!

LEGACY T1

Officially listed as rebuilt 2-8-0s to satisfy wartime production restrictions, the Reading's T1 class 4-8-4s contained very little of their ancestral DNA. The class quickly became popular on the Reading hauling freight and of course, anthracite. Reading saved four of the T1s for their "Reading Rambles" excursions in the 1960s and all four survive today with one fully restored to operation and another not far behind.

The T1's fame grew after the Reading itself faded with locomotives being used for the American Freedom Train in 1975-76 and numerous excursions in the decade that followed. Our latest release of these models includes No. 2102 as she looked on the Rambles, a 1977 excursion to Pittsburgh, redressed for the D&H's anniversary and her current appearance on the Reading and Northern. So, whether you're hauling black diamonds or happy railfans, we've got a T1 for you!

The 50 ton 2-bay hopper was a workhorse on railroads across the country for decades. They could be found in solid trains or in mixed freight. Their smaller size and capacity made them suitable for smaller customers or when blending coal at larger consumers. So whether your feeding a power plant or the local coal yard, our single and three packs have your customers covered.

Lionel's cars feature realistic molded in details for added durability and lower costs making it easy to build a long coal train of your own with multiple road numbers available per scheme. Plastic bodies with added metal weights ensure good tracking even when empty. But loads are also easy with our new one-piece load inserts available separately.

LIGHTNING EXPRESS

Upon opening of the Transcontinental Railroad in 1869, travel across the United States was reduced from months to about ten days. A vast improvement, the trip still required multiple railroads and connections. In 1876, the firm of Jarrett and Palmer, who represented the Booth Theater in New York, came up with a novel marketing event that would push the limits of rail travel and excited communities from coast to coast. Booking a performance in San Francisco just days after one in New York, their acting troop would need to cross the entire breadth of the continent in just four days.

The firm convinced the five cooperating railroads to go along, as the event would be a tremendous advertisement for them, and the Jarrett-Palmer Transcontinental Express departed Jersey City on the Pennsylvania Railroad June 1. The three car train carried the actors and their sets, paid guests, railroad executives, reporters, the day's printing of the New York Herald, and mail and express from the Post Office and Wells Fargo. Five railroads, 83 hours and 39 minutes later, the train arrived at the Central Pacific pier in Oakland - twelve hours ahead of schedule! They performed to a sold out audience the next day.

Along the way, the train's journey became a theatrical experience of its own. Tracks were cleared, switches spiked and everything timed out to make a clear path for the "Lightning Express" but men and machine were tested to their limits. There are accounts of a brakeman oiling an overheating bearing from the steps of a passenger car as the train kept rolling. A hobo clung to the roof of the train at nearly mile a minute speeds west of Cheyenne. A funeral in Nevada was interrupted when the train passed through early with the entire congregation rushing from the church to watch it speed by. Henry Small was the engineer for most of the final 875 miles across the Central Pacific which had decided to make the experiment a bit of an endurance test for the locomotive. His locomotive "Black Fox" had a larger tender to cover more ground. He and the entire crew were presented with new suits by the promoters in recognition of their service.

This train was more than a publicity stunt or an exciting footnote in American railroad history. It helped pave the way for further operational progress and proved to the country what could be done. At the very least, on its 150th anniversary, a model of this fantastic voyage is long overdue! Lionel's new set captures the look of the train at the very end of its run. Lead by Central Pacific no. 149, the Black Fox, the three car train includes a Central Pacific coach (several were taken on and off to add extra braking power after the Pullman's air brakes failed!), Pennsylvania combine No. 202 which carried baggage, supplies and railroad travelers, and of course the Pullman "Marlborough" which transported the promoters, three-person cast and other notables. The locomotive features several new details to best match the original, including an all new tender. The train was not equipped with knuckle couplers. Both link and pin and drawbar couplers are included so that the train can operate on O54 curves or look proper when displayed stationary. Sounds are included in the locomotive and cars feature detailed illuminated interiors with figures. So clear the tracks! The Lightning Express is coming!

You may not recognize Whirlwind, but you probably know her more famous sister, Jupiter! Both were part of a four locomotive order delivered to the Central Pacific from Schenectady, New York in 1868. In an era when few designs were duplicated, Jupiter, Storm, Whirlwind and Leviathan were four of a kind. All saw service on the western portion of the Transcontinental Railroad. Whirlwind was scrapped by the Southern Pacific in 1900. The locomotive is modeled in the original 1868 colors as she would have looked in her first years of service in California, Nevada and Utah.

With a larger roster than most, the practice of naming locomotives ended earlier on the Pennsylvania and paint schemes also took on a more consistent look by the late 1850s. By 1873, black and dark green became the new standard. But through the 1860s many locomotives still featured a nice color palette of dark umbers, red and green accents and polished metal. Number 8 is shown here in one of those common paint schemes as worn in passenger service in the Civil War era - very different look than our previous Pennsylvania hybrid.

 BUILT TO ORDER

Built by Rogers for the New York and Erie in 1866, locomotive 326 was named for Division Superintendent Henry Hobbs. The 6' broad gauge locomotive was richly adorned with polished brass domes and cylinders, nickel plated name plates, a cameo of Hobbs between the drivers and painted murals on the tender and headlight. The cab was a polished walnut and gold leaf details highlighted everything from the cab walls to the sandbox to the ends of the driver axles. The Erie spared no expense on this one! Although we've narrowed her wheelbase to fit your O gauge tracks (the prototype would also be re-gauged after a few years of service) we've kept all of that as-delivered beauty in place.

With the construction of longer railroads came longer journeys and new companies sprang up to make the trip more comfortable for those who could afford the extra fare. The Woodruff Sleeping and Parlor Car Company was one of those early ventures and their ornate cars could be found on railroads nationwide. Although the real General McCallum differed in some details from our tooling, we wanted to make sure the important history of the US Military Railroad and the role locomotives like these 4-4-0s played in the Civil War wasn't left out of this release. Built by the Mason Machine Works, the McCallum arrived in 1864. It was one of several five foot gauge engines purchased for operating on captured lines in the South. The bold colors and elaborate scroll work on the tender are a radical departure from the simple, functional decoration we've come to expect in military vehicles. The McCallum hauled troops, munitions and supply trains until the end of the war when it and many others were sold to railroads which needed new locomotives to power their growing business.

LEGACY C44-9W

One of the most common locomotives on the rails from the 1990s to 2010s, GE's Dash-9 44CW found a home on most of America's major railroads. Today many are being rebuilt and continue to serve large and smaller carriers. Lionel's latest release of this mainstay includes some original paint schemes and some that show the passage of time.

DAKOTA 400

In 1950, the Chicago and Northwestern extended its famous fleet of "400" passenger trains to its furthest point with creation of the "Dakota 400." The train would provide daily service between Huron, South Dakota and Chicago. Traversing four states, the Dakota 400 put the Windy City in more comfortable traveling distance from the plains, making it competitive with Milwaukee and the Twin Cities. The all-coach train featured a variety of services over the years and was usually pulled behind one or two of the Northwestern's many E units.

OLD RELIABLE

Like many roads in the 1950s, the Louisville and Nashville's passenger trains utilized a mix of new lightweight and refurbished heavyweight cars. Resplendent in dark blue, grey and gold, even the older cars made a fine impression for travelers. Trains like the "Dixie Flyer" offered both coach and Pullman accommodations along with a full dining car and of course, head end traffic to help pay the bills. And whether it's a set of new E7s or venerable steam power, these stately trains still uphold the reputation of the "Old Reliable."

LEGACY GP20

EMD's first turbocharged Geep, the GP20 was among the first of the "second generation" of diesels. The GP20 saw wide success across many railroads in mainline service. Over the years many were subsequently rebuilt, some losing their turbos in the process, and diverted to secondary trains and locals. Dozens can still be found today on shortlines across America. The GP20 features many road-specific details like dynamic brakes, Mars lights and rooftop details as appropriate. We've selected roadnames from a wide range of locales and eras to capture the full span of the GP20s' careers. With so many paint scheme and detail options, you can be sure you'll see more variations in the years to come! So turbocharge your roster!

NEW! ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION RADIOACTIVE BOXCAR W/SOUNDS #1955

2626620    $229.99

An Atomic Energy Commission train is only a Lionel creation? Think again! In 1961 Pullman rebuilt four sleepers for AEC service including sleeping space for armed guards and a storage area for the shipments which were carried in lead and concrete casks. The real cars were far less conspicuous than Lionel's. With a home base of Oak Ridge, Tennessee, they were decorated in the standard livery of the L&N and complete with REA Express markings. But the fine print by the baggage doors gives the car away and they could be found on railroads nationwide. While much more in keeping with the prototype than our other "atomic" offerings, we couldn't help but have a little fun here too. This 18" car includes "geiger counter" sounds on a loop and a special clear coating to help it glow in the dark. Now you can add some atom-splitting fun to your operations and still be prototypical!

FREIGHT CARS - PS-2CD 4740

One of the most common freight cars on the rails from the 1970s to the modern era, you didn't have to look hard to find one of these Pullman Standard cars on the rails. Over the years, changes in ownership have only made them more interesting. Lionel's cars feature realistic molded in details for added durability and lower costs making it easy to build up your modern freight trains. This run of cars features colorful road names from the 1970s to today.

FREIGHT CARS - HOPPERS

The 50 ton 2-bay hopper was a workhorse on railroads across the country for decades. They could be found in solid trains or in mixed freight. Their smaller size and capacity made them suitable for smaller customers or when blending coal at larger consumers. So whether your feeding a power plant or the local coal yard, our single and three packs have your customers covered.

Lionel's cars feature realistic molded in details for added durability and lower costs making it easy to build a long coal train of your own with multiple road numbers available per scheme. Plastic bodies with added metal weights ensure good tracking even when empty. But loads are also easy with our new one-piece load inserts available separately.

FEATURES:

- ◆ Plastic body with molded in detail
- ◆ Die-cast trucks with operating couplers and hidden tabs
- ◆ Easy conversion to scale couplers and 2 rail wheels (available separately)
- ◆ Length: 10 3/4" ea
- ◆ Minimum Curve: O31

In 1932 the American Railway Association sought an improved design for the standard boxcars then commonly in use. In pursuit of that, the Pressed Steel Car Company built five sample cars in 1933. The five were used extensively around the country in testing and evaluation. Car #1 eventually made its way to the New York Central and had the dubious honor of being loaned to Pullman Standard for impact testing with one of their new designs. The paint schemes could not have been more plain, but these simple cars tell a big story about the evolution of America's freight car fleet. We feel it's a story worth repeating! Offered here are two of the ARA cars in their original dress along with NYC 100000 all prepared for testing. Give your train crews something to talk about as these pass through town.

THE POLAR EXPRESS™

Santa couldn't always rely on a powerful Berkshire to get the job done! A century before, his "iron reindeer" was a much smaller yet more refined 4-4-0! Decorated in the popular styles of the period, we're confident this is how the train of a child's dreams would have appeared in the 1860s. So turn back the clock and take a memorable journey to the North Pole and back aboard the Polar Express - 1860s edition!

NEW FASTRACK™ TURNOUTS

Lionel's FasTrack turnouts are getting even better! All of our turnouts have been redesigned to incorporate a new, common switch motor and control box. Now you can build your railroad and upgrade to power and command control switches whenever you choose without needing to replace your manual turnouts! Our new manual turnouts look and operate just the same as they always have. The new Power/Control add-on kit includes everything you'll need to upgrade to a command-controlled remote turnout including an easy-to-install switch box which mounts under the roadbed, remote activator lever and even the new switch lamp stand. Use it with any Lionel remote to adjust the track power from a Lionel PowerHouse® or other external AC transformer (sold separately) from the CAB-1L or CAB-2. The PowerMaster® lets you restore track power from your remote so that you don't have to search for tripped breakers.
